THE DAY IS NOT FAR DISTANT WHEN MEMORY ALONE
SHALL REMAIN OF THE GLORIOUS DAYS SPENT
WITHIN THE IVY-CLAD WALLS OF THE OLD INSTI-TUTION—DAYS IN WHICH PRICELESS FRIENDSHIPS
WERE FORMED, IN WHICH ITS TRADITIONAL SPIRIT
BECAME A REALITY IMBEDDED WITHIN THE HEARTS OF EVERY LOYAL "TIGER," AND IN WHICH OUR EFFORTS AND HARDSHIPS WERE AMPLE REWARDED WITH SUCCESS.

IF, THEN, IN THOSE DAYS WHEN MEMORY
HAS GROWN DIM BY REASON OF YEARS
OF ABSENCE, THIS VOLUME WILL EN-

Integer vitae scelerisque purus.

IN THE kaleidoscope of life the law of change prevails and the forces and actors, as a rule, reassemble themselves constantly and swiftly into new shapes. When, therefore, we find an institution like Hampden-Sydney that, with fair consistency, resists change and maintains for years its distinctive characteristics, we wonder. But when we remember that outstanding personalities have influenced and moulded the institution's life and policy for long consecutive periods, we, in a measure, understand its conservative attitude and tendencies.

It is really remarkable how many of Hampden-Sydney's faithful teachers have stood by the old College for long years in spite of hard work and small pay. Charles Martin (1847-1871) helped to carry it through some of the most depressing periods in its history; L. L. Holladay, for thirty-six years (1855-1891) was a professor whom our students loved; Walter Blair (1859-1896) was our ideal of a classical scholar; James R. Thornton, here for twenty-eight years (1883-1911), looms large in the memories of hundreds of alumni; J. H. C. Bagby's marvelous memory and straight thinking are the admiration of his classes to-day as they have been since 1892.

For a longer period (1886-1928) than any of these Dr. Henry C. Brock served the College. As active and emeritus professor, he was here for nearly one-third of Hampden-Sydney's corporate existence.

His life and work have been so frequently and fully set forth in the publications of the College, and in the press of the State, that recapitulation seems superfluous. The briefest outline must suffice.

Son of Robert King Brock and Mildred Ragland, he was born in Richmond, Virginia, January 26, 1845. When the Civil War began he was attending Richmond College, 1859-1861; later he was a student for a year at Randolph-Macon College, then located at Boydton, Virginia. As soon as he reached the age for enlistment he volunteered for service in the Confederate States Army, joining a troop of King William cavalry in General "Rooney" Lee's brigade. Severely wounded at Malone's Crossing, in 1864, the young soldier was for months an invalid and was never again able to rejoin his command.

When his health was sufficiently restored, in 1867, he accepted a position in King William County, where he taught a small neighborhood school, boarding around among his patrons, as was the custom of the time. He thoroughly enjoyed this work and his association with the good people of the county and with his old comrades of the Ninth Virginia Cavalry.

In the fall of 1869 he entered the University of Virginia and, in 1872, received the degree of Bachelor of Literature, meantime holding the position of assistant to Colonel William E. Peters, the professor of Latin. From this time on Mr. Brock was a teacher of young men: 1872-1879, associate in the Kenmore Academy at Amherst, Virginia; 1879-1881, associate in the Charlottesville, Virginia, High School; 1881-1886, head master of the University School in Charlottesville.

In 1886, when Dr. W. S. Currell resigned the chair of English, Political Science and History at Hampden-Sydney, Professor Brock was chosen as his successor. In 1889, when Dr. W. H. Bocock went to the University of Georgia, Professor Brock was transferred to the chair of Greek and French, for which he was peculiarly fitted by his splendid training under Drs. B. L. Gildersleeve and Schele de Vere, his old masters at the University. This arrangement continued until 1911, when the French was given to Professor J. A. Clarke and the Greek was left in Professor Brock's hands. In 1918, having reached the age limit, he was made professor emeritus of Greek, and retired from active class room work. After this he lived quietly at "Estcourt," his home here, among his books and flowers, dispensing a courteous hospitality, mingling with his friends, interested in affairs—local, national and international—the home always pervaded with the atmosphere of culture and genial friendship which the master unconsciously created. After he passed his eighty-fourth birthday Dr. Brock's strength failed, gradually but markedly, and the end came April 30, 1928.

While teaching at Amherst, Dr. Brock married Miss Mary Carter Irving, daughter of Honorable R. K. Irving and Delia Eldridge, of "Rolfeton," Buckingham County, Virginia, a lady who will be remembered by our older alumni as marked by rare charm of person and force of character. There were four children—two sons, Dr. H. I. Brock, of the staff of the New York Times, and Honorable R. K. Brock, of Hampden-Sydney; and two daughters, Mrs. H. C. Thornton, of Asheville, North Carolina, and Miss Delia E. Brock, the presiding genius of our Infirmary. Dr. H. C. Brock and Dr. R. A. Brock were brothers—a pair hard to match for literary taste and achievement—the one a scholar of wide attainments and culture; the other an antiquarian and historian of national reputation.

KALEIDOSCOPE

HAMPDEN 1929 SYDNEY

Though he was, of all men, most modest and retiring, Professor Brock's scholarship was widely recognized. Forty years after his student days, one of his fellow students said: "The rest of us wrote fairly correct exercises; Brock wrote French." A distinguished alumnus, widely known as a man of intellectual power, once said: "Every faculty should contain at least one scholar. At Hampden-Sydney, Professor Brock deserves the name." Austin College conferred the degree of Doctor of Literature and Randolph-Macon that of Doctor of Laws.

Dr. Brock had an intuitive appreciation of the exact shade of meaning inherent in words which made his translations from foreign tongues seem well-nigh perfect renderings of the sense of the original. Master of English, he chose his words with meticulous care—writing and rewriting—never satisfied until he had hit upon the turn and phrase which precisely expressed the thought intended. He possessed, too, the rare gift of suggestion in language and his style attained a richness, a beauty and a force far beyond the literal meaning of his words.

Of Dr. Brock, as a man and as a friend, we need not speak; those who knew him loved him and appreciated him to the full. To those who did not know him, a true characterization would seem fulsome eulogy. What he meant to Hampden-Sydney was expressed by Dr. A. D. Watkins in his own inimitable way, as follows: "To most of the living alumni, Hampden-Sydney, without Professor Brock, seems to lack its peculiar character. He represented much of the distinctly Virginian cast of the institution—breeding, gentility, manners, reserve, classical scholarship, chivalry—much that we should like to believe is of Hampden-Sydney's essence . . . Whatever new may come to the College—and much that is new is greatly needed—the loss of the 'tender grace of a day that is dead' is a sad loss indeed. In times when refinement may have lost its flower, and honor is an oldish word, and chivalry seems not desired by womankind, some ask, with great concern, 'will it still be said that Hampden-Sydney produces gentlemen?'"

We, who loved him, miss our loyal friend—so sincere, so courteous, so gentle.

Rev. Moses Waddell, D. D.

EVERY AGE and every religion has held in the highest esteem its priest and preacher. The tribe of Levi was considered especially blest because it was divinely chosen to attend the priestly duties of the nation of Israel. In the years of the Divided Kingdom the prophet of Jehovah was accorded veneration by all those who were true to their God. In the Christian era the ministers of Christ have been regarded as divinely called. In our own Southland, many a home has set aside a "preacher's chamber"—a modern counterpart of the "prophet's chamber" set aside by the "great woman of Shunem" for Elisha. The preacher, especially in the rural districts, is his community leader; he is usually one of the most educated men in the neighborhood, and before the present school system was adopted, was often the teacher. In times of sickness and sorrow he is the comforter; he rejoices with the happy; he buries the loved dead and adds the consolation which can come only from God's elect. As the minister, so the teacher is the object of veneration and esteem. The one is the instructor in matters spiritual; the other in things material.

Moses Waddell combined in a rare degree the duties of minister and teacher. The annals of the Presbyterian Church boasts no more honored name than that of Waddell. The history of education in the South would be incomplete without a discussion of the contribution of this great man. John Caldwell Calhoun wrote that he might "justly be considered as the father of classical education in the upper country of South Carolina and Georgia." The long list of distinguished pupils, to be named in part later, bears testimony to his abilities as teacher.

A vessel bound for Georgia, but baffled by adverse winds and weather, docked at Charleston, South Carolina. On board was William Waddell and family, immigrants from the neighborhood of Belfast, Ireland. The Waddells tarried in Charleston but a short time and ere long permanently settled in Rowan (now Iredell) County, North Carolina, on the banks of the South Yadkin River. Here Moses Waddell was born, July 29, 1770. Regarding his name, Judge Longstreet says: "He was the last of three sons born on the same spot; and so confident were his parents that he should not survive his birth a single day that, when they found themselves mistaken, they gave him the name of the patriarch who was providentially preserved in his infancy."

Waddell first attended a school about three miles from his home, in 1777-1778. Here he learned to read and to write a neat hand. In 1778 Moses entered the Latin Department of Clio's Nursery, a grammar school established through the instrumentality of the Reverend James Hall, a Presbyterian minister. It was due to the importunity of friends that Moses became a student here. For Mr. William Waddell for some time objected because he had money neither to purchase books nor to bear the expenses of such a course of study. At last he yielded, trusting Providence to provide the means. Mr. James McEwen, first, then Mr. Francis Cummin, later an eminent divine, were the teachers. The British incursions into the vicinity caused the suspension of the school from May, 1780, to April, 1782. In 1784, after he had studied Latin and Greek, Euclid's Elements, Geography, Moral Philosophy and Criticism, Waddell left Clio's Nursery.

In October, 1784, Waddell became teacher in a country school some fifteen miles from home. In 1787 he established a school in Greene County, Georgia. Indian troubles caused the closing of his school. When quiet had been restored in Greene in 1788, his parents moved down from North Carolina and he opened a new school. That same year he received his first permanent religious impressions; he resolved to become a minister and, in 1790, he entered Hampden-Sydney College, in Prince Edward County, Virginia. Here he was a member of the Union Literary Society. He graduated in September, 1791. He was licensed to preach by the Hanover Presbytery the following year.

After he had completed his college course, Waddell taught school in Columbia County, Georgia. His first wife, whom he married in 1795, was Miss Catherine Calhoun, daughter of Patrick Calhoun and sister of John C. Calhoun. She lived about a year after the marriage. He married, in 1800, Miss Elizabeth Woodson Pleasants, of Halifax County, Virginia. On leaving Columbia, in 1801, he opened a school at Vienna, Abbeville District, South Carolina.

Three years later he moved to Willington and there established the celebrated Willington Academy, said to be the most famous of ante-bellum schools. Among his pupils were Hugh Swinton Legaré, the brilliant essayist and Secretary of State in the Cabinet of President Tyler; John Caldwell Calhoun, South Carolina's great Senator and the militant defender of the rights of the states; James Louis Pettigru, the cultured barrister and leading Unionist of South Carolina, mentioned by Hayne as a regular visitor to that rendezvous of the literati and savants of Charleston, "Lord John" Russell's bookstore; Judge A. B. Longstreet, President of Emory University and author of the inimitable Georgia Scenes; W. H. Crawford, Democratic-Republican leader, member of Monroe's Cabinet, and an unsuccessful contender for the Presidency of the United States in 1824; George McDuffie, Governor of South Carolina, United States Senator, eloquent apologist for states rights; and Butler, Calhoun's able colleague in the Senate. What an influence Hampden-Sydney had on political, literary and educational life in the South through these pupils of Waddell's. Think how they must have imbibed that intangible, indefinable something—the traditional Hampden-Sydney spirit—from this great teacher. Yea, verily, Hampden-Sydney may well claim these great men as her grandsons—these leaders who sat at the feet of that noble alumnus—the Gamaliel of the South. While at Willington, Waddell received the degree of Doctor of Divinity from the College of South Carolina, in 1807. His Academy at Willington was in the country, far from town; it was noted for its simple life and strict discipline.

In 1819 Dr. Waddell entered on his duties as President of the University of Georgia. Dr. Alonzo Church wrote: "The circumstances of the University were . . . peculiarly embarrassing . . . They were such as few men would be able to meet, without ultimately abandoning the object in despair. And to the wisdom and prudence and reputation of that good man is Georgia very largely indebted for the respectability and usefulness of her State College. The success which attended his efforts in raising the institution so rapidly as he did to respectability has been, to many, inexplicable. But to those who understand his character that success is by no means surprising. He accepted the office after repeated solicitation and only upon the fullest conviction that God had called him to this field of labor. Perhaps few men, in all the business of life, more prayerfully inquired as to the path of duty, than Dr. Waddell. And by the path of duty I mean the glory of God in the advancement of the Redeemer's Kingdom. In 1829 Dr. Waddell resigned the Presidency of the University. This closed his preceptual labors of two score and five years. Alexander H. Stephens paid a glowing tribute to Waddell's ability as a teacher: "In his insight into the character of boys, the constitution of their minds, their capacities and aptitudes and in drawing out and developing their faculties by proper training and discipline and government, he had few, if any, superiors in the United States."

After Waddell retired from active teaching he continued in the ministry for several years. While a teacher, he preached regularly. "Few Sabbaths," according to Church, "found him out of the pulpit." He taught because he believed that he could in this way best support the Kingdom of Christ. Punctual he was and diligent. The most adverse weather could not deter him from keeping an appointment. Calhoun bears witness that he was pious, zealous, well versed in theology, plain, simple and earnest.

Regarding his influence, it was widespread. Judge Longstreet wrote: "The fruits of his vinyard are scattered far and wide through most of the Southern States and long have they been seen in rich luxuriance in the Capitol of the Union. Indeed, it would be hard to name the place of rank which his pupils have not occupied . . . but I do fully believe that, without the impulse which he gave to their talents, many of them who rose to high rank would never have been heard of." Calhoun, Legaré, Crawford, McDuffie, Butler, Longstreet, Pettigru! And a son of old Hampden-Sydney taught them! The spirit of Hampden-Sydney was carried by this alumnus to the lower South, there to be the inspiration of the great men of that region. Two sons of Waddell became celebrated and able teachers; one, James Pleasants Waddell, was Professor of Latin and Greek at the University of Georgia; another, John Newton Waddell, was Professor of Latin and Greek at the University of Mississippi and President of LaGrange College. Moses Waddell had another connection with the Prince Edward College—his daughter, Miss Janetta Waddell, married Dr. Archibald Alexander, fourth President of Hampden-Sydney. Several of her descendants became great ministers and teachers. What a blessing Moses Waddell has been to mankind.

Longstreet said of Waddell's Christian experience: "As a Christian his character was unexceptional. He was not without the Christian's trials; and these, for some years after he embraced the Cross, were uncommonly severe; but, as the surges that break over the coral reef only add brilliance to its native beauty, so these trials but added lustre to the 'beauty of his holiness.' His piety burned with a steady flame . . . He was active and constant in the discharge of his ministerial duties and he shrunk from no labor which his ecclesiastical relations imposed upon him."

After Dr. Waddell retired from the Presidency of the University of Georgia he lived at Willington. In 1836 he suffered a stroke of palsy. Three years later he was taken to the home of his son, Professor James Pleasants Waddell, at Athens, Georgia. Here he died, July 21, 1840. Of him how appropriately can it be said:

*"Servant of God, well done;
Rest from thy loved employ,
Thy battle ended, victory won,
Enter thy Master's joy."*

"TULANE"

"Tulane" hails from near the village of Clover. Throughout his four years here he has well proved his worth on the campus by his wide range of activities and by his diligence and conscientiousness in all his undertakings. He is a hard worker and his faithful efforts have not been without reward. His managership of the 1928 Football Team displayed his capacity for work and his shrewd business ability. But along with it all he has found time for his studies, a fact to which his high grades attest. His pleasant smile, cheery greeting and his ever willingness to befriend his companions have endeared him to the hearts of many who predict for him a bright future.

"PIGGY"

In "Piggy's" brief sojourn of three years with us he has shown his ability in many phases of college life and activities, establishing a most enviable record. Being an applicant for a degree in three years is in itself no small job, but Baker has carried it off with honors and has had time for activities and social mixing as well. One never catches "Piggy" in other than a playful mood for he is always full of good humor and fun, but under it is a vein of seriousness of purpose which has stood him in good stead. One evidence of the trust placed in his judgment and character by his classmates was his election to the Student Council where he exhibited his broadmindedness and keen sense of justice. His winning disposition has made for him many friends and these fortunate ones, who are not few in number, have found in him a true, loyal and pleasant companion.

Hoover came to us from the Valley and has been a loyal supporter of that section. His keen mind and natural ability linked with the willingness to work have brought him success here. He has found time to show himself proficient with the hammer and saw. Hoover has done well in his classwork. He is most proficient in English and History. He possesses a remarkable appreciation of Literature. In History he has shown a keen ability to weigh different statements by different authorities. Bear is an active member of the Ministerial Association. He is a loyal supporter of Hampden-Sydney in every phase of its activities, including relations with S. T. C. We wish for him a successful career in the ministry—his chosen life work.

"BUTCH"

"Butch" is a living exemplification of the fact that a man can be a real he-man and a gentleman at the same time. He has amply displayed his ability to give and take hard knocks on the gridiron where his clear head and fighting spirit have spelled defeat for many a worthy foe. But Blanton is by no means a one-track man. His tall, athletic build and his easy nonchalance have marked him as a real social lion whenever he has ventured forth into social circles. One has the feeling about Blanton that here is a man who is "all wool and a yard wide"—always the same good-natured, thoroughly sincere, manly, gentlemanly "Butch."

In Jack we see one of the social leaders of the campus. To him the eyes of all the Hampden-Sydney Greeks turn when they want amusement. On his capable shoulders falls the burden of the Pan-Hellenic dance, for he is the president of the Pan-Hellenic Council. The notable success of this year's dance attests his social qualities and business worth. His successful management of the business end of the Tiger proves that he is a man of rare business ability. He is a true friend. Those who are fortunate enough to know him well find him a most agreeable companion. He is reserved to an extent, but this only lends a charm to his magnetic personality. As Elinor Glyn would say, "Jack has IT."

"BUCK"

"Buck" hails from down in the Tidewater country and must have brought with him to Hampden-Sydney an inherited love of water—for when has there been a water battle on first passage, in these four years, in which "Buck" was not a principal? Although he has spent a large proportion of his time at college in the Science Hall in the pursuit of lore among the test tubes and microscopes he has yet found time to make himself a well-known figure in town at "Shannon's" and "Sam's." Another of "Buck's" hobbies is touch football and no game has been complete without him since the balmy fall of '25. He has made for himself a large number of friends on the campus and all of them join as one in wishing him the best of success in the future.

Carpenter is another one of those tall, dashing young men for which his native town, the Capital of the Confederacy, is justly renowned. This boy has verily proved himself a second Demosthenes, or better still, another Patrick Henry. We can never forget his passionate pleas in regard to sex equality. And speaking of sex, that is one line in which Carpenter has proved himself a real Ph. D. Hampden-Sydney cannot help but regret the loss of this man. His whole-hearted good nature and natural ability coupled with his capacity for hard work have marked him as a man of real worth.

Always with a pleasant smile, never hurried, except on Saturday night when Farmville calls, he has shown himself a worthy son of his father before him.

His athletic participation is confined to baseball and in this sport he has done very well. "Bill" is of the type who stand forth as straightforward Christian gentlemen in any crowd. The name, Gaffin, is familiar to every Hampden-Sydney student and resident of the hill. It has a variety of meanings, but when heard on the campus it always stands for the same true type of Hampden-Sydney man. If common sense, seriousness, steadiness of purpose, patience and perseverance count for anything in this world, we predict that Dick will carve a niche in the Hall of Fame that even time will have a hard task in smoothing over. Some people study to pass exams and to receive credits; others study largely because they appreciate the true worth of knowledge and are desirous of better fitting themselves for the struggles of life. Dick is a staunch member of the latter class. He is a true friend, one to sacrifice much on the Altar of Friendship, and, by virtue of this admirable trait, he has become endeared to many.

No one would ever guess, when looking at this handsome and graceful lad, that he was viewing one of the finest all-round athletes in the state, but so he is, for, as a glance at "Nookie's" honors will show, there is scarcely a form of sport in which he is not highly efficient. In football, basket ball or track he may be sighted as one of the College's best. Then, too, he has not so allowed his studies to interfere with his education as to stay close in harbor, but he has kept warm the road to Farmville, and there his motto, "There's safety in numbers" has caused many a heartache. With all these activities, "Nookie" is never too busy to speak to a Freshman and has scores of friends in every class. There will be a large place to fill when "Nookie" leaves and our wish is that he will do as well out in life as he did within the walls of his Alma Mater.

"DICK"

In Dick Henneman Hampden-Sydney is losing a worthy man. He is preëminently a student, yet he is not a grind; he has the rare gift of literary and artistic appreciation; he is a real scientist; as a linguist he ranks high. All in all, Dick is a well rounded man. No feature of college life has he overlooked. Above all, he is a true friend. Devoted is he to Hampden-Sydney; loyal to all its activities. He ranks as a typical Hampden-Sydney gentleman, traditionally famous. In scholarship he has led his class during his stay here. Surely this is no mean achievement. Surely this is something of which he may well be proud. Yet Dick intermingles his work with play to such an extent that he gets as much out of life as any man here. We shall miss his cheery greeting and congenial conversation for many years on the campus, but we wish for him, aye, even predict for him a brilliant future.

Although he doesn't ever seem to let anything bother him, his accomplishments show that he enters seriously into anything undertaken. His faithful work on the football squad for three years commands the sincerest respect and heartiest praise for his team mates. Then, too, his frequent visits to High Street have kept the academic part of his curriculum from becoming too much of a burden, and weighing too heavily on his shoulders. He may be seen at any dance within miles of Hampden-Sydney, and always manifests his wonderful ability to fall into his niche of society. *"Hats off, along the street there comes
A blare of bugles, a ruffle of drums,
A flash of color across the sky——"*

The above might have been made immortal verse by adding the line—"For none but Cecil Jones is passing by." Jones is undoubtedly one of the most virile members of a class whose middle name is virility. If any one despairs of man having become a sophisticated automaton, a few minutes spent in the rollicking spirit of fun and good humor that just naturally gushes forth from Cecil will soon restore his faith in the reality of human nature. The more serious side of Cecil's nature was displayed upon the athletic field and his record both upon the gridiron and cinder path will not soon be forgotten in the lair of the Tiger. To convert the old adage, we predict that Jones will "dare anything and gain everything."

Ozone is one of the more lively students of Hampden-Sydney. When has one seen him when he has not been peppy and full of fun? When is not such a one welcome at any gathering? With his steady good nature and happiness he has made himself a well known figure on the campus, in Farmville and, in fact, almost anywhere he has been. He is a hard worker, too, as is attested by his list of honors and one who is well acquainted with all aspects of managership, whether it be of a sport or a publication. He is a born promoter of anything he attempts or is interested in. Whether this quality is responsible for his popularity among the fairer sex we do not know, but his appearance on the dance floor and in town has always been interesting to the ladies. With all his ability, Ozone will surely find a place of prominence in big business and we feel indeed fortunate in sending out such a man, but his friends will miss his happiness and cheer when each has gone out to pursue his calling.

"JEW-GREEK"

The Class of '29 has an all-round man in "Jew-Greek," another one of the products of Richmond, although the Valley has some claim to him. To know him is to be struck with his upright character and frankness. He has done much for his Alma Mater by giving of his best in the literary and forensic fields. He is a true Tiger with the "old Tiger fight," and an ardent supporter of the teams. He ranks high scholastically—mirabile dictu, for he never allowed his studies to interfere with his college education.

Tom is one of these happy and happy-go-lucky fellows, full of fun, wit and mischief. Who has not heard him keep a group roaring by his endless number of jokes? Who has not heard his characteristic laugh, which no one can imitate, as he goes about the campus?

Lewis came to the ivy-clad walls of old Hampden-Sydney from Southwestern University with "Brother Bill" in time to give the College the benefit of three years of capable and whole-hearted effort along a variety of lines. He has excelled in scholarship, being one of the highest men in his class. He has an unusual record as an intercollegiate debater, having been undefeated on the rostrum in two years. He has attained success on the staffs of both Tiger and Magazine and his literary ability is shown by membership in Sigma Upsilon. He has also taken a part in athletics and was a snappy, scrappy member of the football squad last fall. "BILL"

"Seest thou a man diligent in business? He shall stand before kings; he shall not stand before mean men." Bill Lacy is verily a "man diligent in business." Until one has worked with Bill one does not truly appreciate his abilities. Few could edit as fine a book as THE 1928 KALEIDOSCOPE. The Tiger of 1928-29 will ever stand as a noble memorial to his journalistic ability. He edited the 1928 Freshman Handbook in an able and admirable manner. Bill also excels in the forensic line. His level headedness, common sense and shrewd business judgment, as well as his mastery of logic, has spelled defeat for many an opponent. He has not forsaken his books in his brilliant career in activities, for his name is no stranger to the Dean's Honor Roll. Hampden-Sydney has seldom produced one so unfaltering in his love for Alma Mater. We believe that, though he attain the topmost rung in the ladder of success, though he carve his name indelibly on the wall of fame (such is our sincere wish), he will ever be true to the principles of Hampden-Sydney.

A true friend, always happy, always laughing, his cheery "What d'ye say?" will be sorely missed on the campus next year. "Red" has been an industrious and successful worker not only in his books, as shown by his graduating in three years, but also in other branches of college activities, as an intercollegiate debater, a writer, and member of the Jongleurs. During the two years of his sojourn with us "Mac" has engaged in many lines of work. Notable among his activities are his scholastic and scientific interests. Due to these he has been elected to membership in the French Club and the Chi Beta Phi Scientific Fraternity. There are few men who transfer after two years work elsewhere who make as favorable impression as Turner has. "ANDY"

"Andy" is the only unoriginal thing about Henry. He received this sobriquet from his brother who made a record here before him. "Mac" has duplicated, or shall we say eclipsed his brother's fine record to such a degree that he has even been given his name. "Andy" is typified by his fine personality, which is built upon the cardinal virtues of honor, loyalty, a fighting tenacity and winning manners. He is not a lover of books, but a sense of duty has compelled him to overcome his dislike, and apply himself unhampered to his scholastic duties. On the athletic field, and with his friends he is seen at his best. The track team, of which he was captain this year, has seen his value as a leader and an athlete. In football, it was his superior manhood which enabled him to be one of the most versatile of players.

In saying goodbye to "Mac" we are sending forth into the world a true man, and one who is already advanced on the difficult highway which leads to success.

"PEYTON"

Peyton Moore has achieved an enviable reputation as a student. He is one who really enjoys studying. He is without a doubt the outstanding Greek student here. He appreciates the classics and other literature as few men can. One of his favorite habitats is the Library. One cannot fail to see this in conversing with him for he shows, although he does not try to, that he has read widely. Peyton is a man on whom everyone can depend. Whenever one hears that Peyton is doing something, he rests assured that it will be done promptly and well. He shows his loyalty to the College by attending all the intercollegiate contests and by being a frequent observer of athletic practice. He is a true gentleman, a loyal friend, a good student, an agreeable companion, a diligent worker. These characteristics will carry him far as a teacher—his chosen work.

"CHRIS"

Dynamic, energetic, yet full of that sardonic outlook on life, that slight touch of cynicism that baffles analysis; just so is Chris. Whatever he touches he recreates with a flourish of his own imagination, with a spark of fire from his own furnace. Chris has not been inactive while at Hampden-Sydney as his record shows. As Publicity Agent of the College he has created a new standard of excellence that has done much to give Coach Bernier's brand of athletes the credit that they deserve. In fact, in every capacity in which Chris has served he has proven himself a leader of men, lending to his work a striking originality of ideas and an individuality of thought all his own. Chris is a typical old Virginia gentleman, ever ready to sing the praises of his Mother State. With his noble qualities he has a brilliant future.

In this man we have one who is true to his friends, his work and his convictions. He was handicapped in several ways but his persistent effort has won for him the victory. In his quiet way he has made many friends and has given encouragement where he could. He has stood by the ideals of Hampden-Sydney, and taken an active part in Christian activities. He has not neglected his social life and has been seen often at S. T. C. His phenomenal success in the neighboring missions forecasts for him a successful future in his Master's service.

"And, Ladies and Gentlemen, this is the Constitution of the United States." These words will ever bring back to our minds the remembrance of Jack, who for four years aided so greatly the forensic success of Hampden-Sydney by his appearances on the platform. Many are the times when he has been the reason for his Alma Mater emerging successful from verbal battles with other institutions. Jack has also made great progress in the oratorical line, and he has been student instructor in English.

His frequent trips "north," and frequent appearance on the dance floor have made him a well known figure in the society circles of the College, and although he is somewhat reserved, those who know him greatly cherish his friendship. Jack will be greatly missed on the Hill, but we know he will make a success in whatever he undertakes.

"MAXCY"

Maxcy's college career spells advancement, achievement, and success. Coming to this country direct from China, his timidity kept him somewhat in obscurity the major part of his Freshman year. But from that time on he has climbed steadily upward in every pursuit that he has undertaken. His excellent tennis ability has been a great factor in the unusual record of the netmen during the past few years, and in recognition of this ability he has been awarded the captaincy for two successive years. His Senior year finds him leader of the basketeers and president of his class.

Whatever he may choose for his life work, may his efforts be characterized by the same sense of honor, fairness, uprightness, and zeal that he displayed among his college mates.

Yes, this was the place, and truly a place that he would come to love greatly. His companions soon recognized him to be of the dependable type with an unusual capacity for hard work. When a duty fell to his lot he undertook it with a characteristic zeal and determination. His faithful and untiring efforts were fittingly rewarded by his election to Business Manager of the 1929 Magazine. His class work has been done with thoroughness. Through it all he has been dependable and is the kind of friend that everyone likes to claim. In academic work and student activities he has been far from idle. His ability in his classes has been clearly shown by the regular appearance of his name on the Dean's Honor Roll and among his campus activities are his work in the German Club, of which he was president, and his work as Associate Editor of The Hampden-Sydney Tiger. However, a man's real worth is not shown entirely by his honors. Elam has been the needed cog in numerous machines for the betterment of Hampden-Sydney and its students.

John is indeed a man without an enemy. In his years here he has proven himself the friend of all who have known him. The cause of his successful relationships is largely due to his unassuming, contented personality. One should not assume John to be a “book bug” for he often was seen in the busy streets of Farmville. Wade was no ladies’ man, seldom frequenting the portals of S. T. C. It was, perhaps, the aversion to the fairer sex which caused John to become so skilled in the ultra-male sport of pool. In John the school is sending forth a steady, unconceited, long-suffering, hard worker, who will, we are sure, meet with his due reward.

For many years the hills of West Virginia have played a real part in the life of this institution by sending their worthy sons who have taken an active and, in many instances, a leading part in college activities and campus life. "Bumps" is a small lad, but only in stature. In his four years he has made a name for himself, one that is a credit to his school and state. He has become well known throughout the state as a basket ball player. His speed, alertness and knowledge of the game compensate in a double measure for his loss in size. He has been active in many branches of college life and all his efforts have been characterized by a sincere devotion to his task. Truly he has made a success of his college career in the largest sense of the term.

"SPEC"

In "Spec" we see a near approach to the much rumored, but seldom seen, all-round man. Sincerity of purpose, combined with loyalty to his friends, typify Worden's character as well as any words could. It is this sincerity which has led him to his position of prominence in campus activities, so widely varied. By way of introducing himself to Hampden-Sydney, Worden made the football team his freshman year. He early began to show his characteristics of leadership to his classmates who, in his junior year, elected him to the presidency of his class. On "Death Valley" Worden is unsurpassed as a football player. For four years he has given his best to uphold the standard of his Alma Mater's athletic records and as captain he successfully led the "Tigers" through one of their hardest seasons.

In all, we are sending out a man whose record we envy, whose presence we will miss and whose future we are assured will be filled with success and happiness.

A Precocious Youth

HAT remarkable old Scotchman who plucked his eyebrows out one by one (they do it now for æsthetic reasons presumably) when he got mad, so they tell us—he who helped a lot toward starting a Revolution and a college at the same time—he must introduce this tale. John Witherspoon, of Paisley, Scotland, but for the six strenuous years prior to the beginning of the American Revolution the patriot president of early Princeton; he is the man and Hampden-Sydney is the College. The Precocious Youth is his son.

Old John had kept things humming in Scotland in defense of the rights of his fellow Scots and was all ready for continued activity in America. He was among the most ardent advocates for the Declaration of Independence and one of the most enthusiastic signers. The English did not like him—they did not like him a bit! They said he was the most rebellious of all the rebels! He was a dominant figure in the Continental Congress throughout the Revolution and Washington's most able and consistent defender even in the darkest days at Valley Forge.

Virginians had liked him, had felt his influence, had sent their sons to Princeton to be educated by him. His graduates were prominent in Virginia. One of them was Light Horse Harry Lee. Another was James Madison, the Father of the Constitution. There were a great many others and most of them were working for Virginia.

This tale centers around one of them who came to Southside Virginia. Samuel Stanhope Smith had not only brought a degree from Princeton to Virginia, but had added to that commendable "villainy" by bringing President Witherspoon's daughter as his wife and helpmate. Probably because he felt that a college president's daughter might get homesick in the then Virginia backwoods so far from the classic shades of her father's campus, he founded a college of his own. He named it for John Hampden and Algernon Sydney because he, too, was a son of liberty—Anne's father had inspired him to be a son of liberty. But the tale is not yet told.

The tale is that John Witherspoon had a young son, David, who had shown a very early interest in the raiment of the flock rather than the flock. It is authentically stated that this David entered the Freshman Class of Princeton at the age of ten, when most of us are proud of fourth grade standing. At fourteen Princeton presented him a portion of the raiment of the flock and created him Bachelor of Arts. (He had no reëxaminations to take.)

But the interesting thing, the amazing thing, is that at between fifteen and sixteen he wended his way southward and, at the age when most of us are glad to be juniors in high school, he became a member of the Faculty at Hampden-Sydney. That he was qualified to take care of the position is indicated by the fact that his correspondence with his father for the year following his going to Hampden-Sydney is still in existence and most of it is made up of long letters in Latin and French. The old Scotchman is proud of his son, but his son must never know it. His advice is the advice of a father who would like to trust his son entirely, but is hesitant—hesitant because the boy is young and eager and may be foolhardy. It would be well to sell the horse he had ridden from New Jersey lest it be a burden, lest it encourage idleness.

Yet, the young professor is all man. The Revolution was on and the country needed volunteers. The patriot lads from Hampden-Sydney, fifteen, sixteen, seventeen years old, volunteered in a body. As they marched away to Williamsburg in Hampden-Sydney's first colors, the gray hunting caps and the purple shirt, David Witherspoon, now seventeen, was the first lieutenant and second in command. He carried in his head and heart the old Scotch father's advice penned to him from Princeton: "Let there be decency in your outward carriage, reserve and modesty in your conversation and humility in your heart."

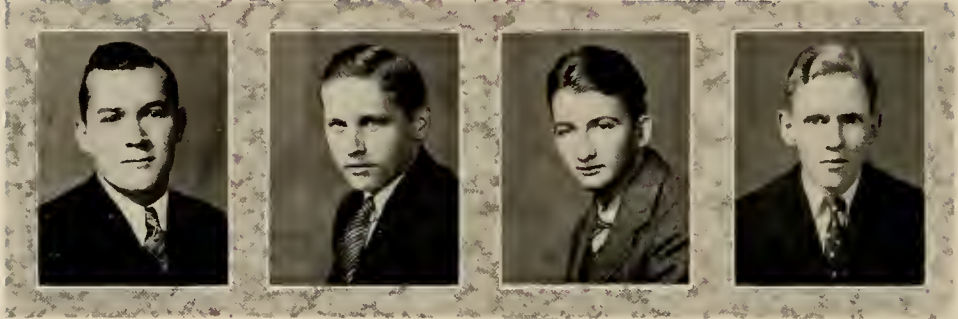

—FREEMAN H. HART.

Football, 1928

THE 1928 football schedule was the most difficult assignment ever to have been given to a Garnet and Gray team. Numerically the season cannot be called a success but, when the quality of play is taken into consideration and the record of each game is looked into, every Tiger is proud of the showing the team made and is proud to say that that team represented his Alma Mater. During the season nationally famous football teams were met, coming from schools with student bodies many times greater than the Tiger institution, yet in no game did Hampden-Sydney fail to make a creditable showing, displaying always that characteristic indomitable fighting spirit. It has always been the policy of Coach Charlie Bernier, the man who has made the great teams of Hampden-Sydney possible and who has practically been the sole factor in placing the Tiger College on the athletic map, never to point for any one game, but to take each team as it appears on the schedule.

Two outstanding accomplishments are to be credited to the 1928 Tiger team; its brilliant showing against Cornell University, one of the foremost teams of the East, and its clear-cut victory over its traditional rival, the University of Richmond. In passing it would not be amiss to say that Hampden-Sydney is perhaps the most sought after of all small colleges by large institutions to be placed on their football schedule. After playing Cornell it was asked to return for a game the next season, and also in 1929 the Tigers appear on the schedule of Colgate University.

At the beginning of the year prospects for the team looked extremely gloomy, for fourteen members of last year's varsity squad were not available. In addition to this, no freshmen could be used to bolster up the great gaps as Hampden-Sydney had entered the conference which put a ban on freshmen participating on varsity teams. However, Coach Bernier, in his miraculous way, developed a representative team.

After a brief period of preliminary training the Tigers opened the season in Lexington against the Flying Squadron of the Virginia Military Institute. Equipped with only a limited offense of a few plays, Hampden-Sydney made a great showing against the heavy team and until the last few minutes it was anybody's game, until the limited amount of Tiger material found itself pitted against the fresh reserves of the Institute. The score, V. M. I., 14; Hampden-Sydney, 7.

Hampden-Sydney opened up the Virginia Polytechnic Institute game with a well nigh perfect defense but the game of last week had taken its toll in injuries and in the latter half the little Tiger's depleted squad's defense weakened and the Techmen walked away with the big end of a 32-7 victory. The thrilling feature of the game was when Ralph Willis, whirlwind Tiger halfback, received the kickoff and with the help of faultless blocking, squirmed and twisted and sidestepped his way up the field ninety-two yards for a touchdown.

The Cornell game was the first time a Hampden-Sydney team had ever played a large Eastern school and it was the consensus of opinion among the spectators that the Virginians outplayed the Big Red team for three and one half periods of the game, as the Cornelians were not able to push over its two winning touchdowns until the last four minutes of play. It was also stated that the Tigers were the best coached team to be seen on Schoellkopf Field in recent years. The feature of the game was the passing attack of the Garnet and Gray led by Willis, Peach and Lawson. The score, Cornell, 18; Hampden-Sydney, 6.

Hampden-Sydney triumphed over Rutherford College, of North Carolina, in the first home game by the score of 12 to 0. It resulted in a much stiffer encounter than was expected as the visitors presented a hard driving attack. The passing of the Tigers in the last stages proved the undoing of the Tarheels.

The Tigers started the conference schedule by defeating Randolph-Macon, 39 to 6, at the Home Coming Day celebration. The game was played before the largest crowd ever to witness a game on Death Valley. Hampden-Sydney in this encounter showed its superiority in every department of play. During the contest practically every man on the Tiger squad was used. The Tiger's aerial attack reached its peak in this game.

Lynchburg came to Death Valley with the Tigers as host and, playing the part of the faultless host, the Garnet and Gray let the Hornets of the Hill City take an 18 to 12 victory. There is little to be said about this contest other than the Tigers were badly crippled and did not play up to form.

The next Saturday came the Richmond game and with it Hampden-Sydney's most brilliant game of the season. Only once was the Tiger goal in danger of being crossed and in addition to crossing the Spider marker twice for thirteen points the Tigers played continually in Richmond territory. Tom Peach's punting was at its height and Captain "Spec" Worden played the most brilliant game of his checkered career. Blanton also came in for honors. In fact the whole team played a remarkable game.

In the final game of the season Hampden-Sydney, showing a reversal of form and the strain of a strenuous season, fell before the fast moving attack of William and Mary, 34 to 0.

BASKET BALL

BASKET BALL SQUAD

Basket Ball, 1928-1929

THE SEASON'S BASKET BALL record is one of the best ever presented by a Tiger team. When the record is spoken of it is not entirely relative to scores, but to the spirit and fight of a team that was never out. In every game of the season the team fought and kept on fighting. The parts which composed this splendid Tiger machine were not large, but surely were efficient and experienced. If any stars were chosen the entire team would, necessarily, have to be named, but Captain Smith and Enoch Wooton surely played "conspicuous ball."

Prospects were bright to begin with, for there were six letter men back from the previous year. The early success of the team was somewhat hampered by the influenza quarantine, which caused a change of the entire schedule.

In the first game, with the powerful Washington and Lee team, the representatives of the Garnet and Gray fell before a superior foe to the count of 45 to 26.

William and Mary was next met. This game was one of the closest of the season; the Tigers winning by the narrow margin of 26 to 24.

The next night, in the game with Richmond, fate reversed this score to favor the "Spiders."

Roanoke and Lynchburg, the next two challengers, both met defeat at the hands of the team which had reached its stride.

Weakened by the grind of examinations the Tigers fell before the attack of Wake Forest by the score of 32 to 20.

Bridgewater advanced into the Bengal lair, only to be repulsed by a 36 to 25 score.

Richmond, the champions, who were now riding down the home stretch and approaching the finish passed Hampden-Sydney at the pace of 46 to 31.

A strong Emory and Henry team which had battled the Richmond champions, only to lose by a few points, fell before the onslaught of Bernier's men. This game marked the height of the teams scoring ability for they amassed 53 points to Emory and Henry's 31.

One of the closest and most thrilling games of the year was the 26 to 23 defeat handed the Tigers by William and Mary in the second game. The score "see-sawed" back and forth during the entire second half and, unluckily, happened to be in William and Mary's favor at the final gun shot.

At Blacksburg the team defeated a powerful V. P. I. quintet by a close score, but was beaten the next night at Roanoke in a closely contested scrap with Roanoke College.

The best game of the season was the one with Randolph-Macon on the local floor. Never have two teams fought harder than these teams did. One led for a few minutes only to be surpassed by the other. A frenzied crowd yelled the Tigers to a well earned victory; the Jackets falling, 43 to 38.

In the next two games a tired, but fighting quintet fell by close scores.

To summarize: the season was a great success and players, coach and the supporting student body are due credit.

BASEBALL

Baseball, 1929

HE TIGERS have enjoyed a very successful baseball season, which at the start of practice in March had far from a bright outlook. Coach Bernier, with only one varsity pitcher back in the fold, had the bright prospect of making for himself two hurlers who could relieve John Hunt, the mainstay of the staff of last year. But at the outset the Tiger mentor gave every man on the team a chance to show his wares and, in the process of elimination, he weeded out of the brush two competent hurlers. The first to prove his worth was Easley Lee, a South Boston prospect, who turned back the highly famed University of Delaware ball club by the score of 8-5. Then, at Lynchburg, after the Hornets had procured six runs off of Hunt in the first inning, he brought Captain Davis from behind the plate and let him toe the rubber for the remainder of the game. He did it so well that the Tigers came from behind and won the game 12-9 and from what looked like a black and dismal season for the wearers of the Garnet and Gray emerged a team that could ably represent the tradition of Death Valley as the summary page will show.

The Tiger team, for the first time in the last five years, has a group of ball-tossers that can hit the ball, and the wrecking crew, as Shiflet, Lawson, Davis and Marshall are well termed, have caused much annoyance to the opposing moundsmen. But these four alone are not the only ones of hitting prowess, for, in fact, there is not one on the whole team that can be called weak. They have all had their off days, but when hits have meant runs, that is when one outside of the above four has smacked the ball for the extra hit. Shiflet, the Tiger first baseman, is leading the team with an average of above .500. In the Lynchburg game, he toed the plate five times and got as many hits from the delivery of the Horner hurler. Lawson and Marshall are both hitting above .300, while the rest of the team's average will come close to .225.

Another redeeming feature of this ball club, that was supposed not to have much chance, is their fielding, especially in the infield with Willis and Knight guarding the midway station. These two boys have pulled more double plays than any other two infielders in the state. Besides being proficient in this line they are both fast and adapted to going deep into their territory and snagging balls out of the ozone that looked like real bingles. The fielding of Price, Lawson and Marshall in the outfield has been very commendable. It is good to hold the best for last, and in the last but not least of the team's make-up has been the Bengal battery, composed of Captain "Meb" Davis and John Hunt. These two boys have worked in perfect unison for the last two seasons and due to their untiring effort on the firing line and knowledge of opposing batters have turned back the hopes of other coaches by their wonderful coöperation. Hunt's best game was against the University of Richmond, the traditional enemies of the Tigers. Although defeated by the score of 1-0, due to poor fielding, he only allowed three hits and sent ten back to the bench by the strike-out, and never allowed a free pass to the initial sack. He defeated Bridgewater 3-2 and allowed them only four hits. Hunt hails from South Boston, and as he is a sophomore, great things are looked for from this hurler before his days at Hampden-Sydney are over. Too much praise cannot be given Captain Davis and his bunch of ball-tossers. They have played under handicaps and have ably defended their Alma Mater under the careful and watchful tutelage of Coach Charles "Yank" Bernier.

Track, 1929

WITH a nucleus of three letter men around which to build a team, the track season developed into one of the most successful in the history of the College. In the five meets the "Tigers" came off with the larger end of the score, losing only to Lynchburg College 64 to 61 in a very hotly contested meet which followed close on the contest with Emory and Henry. The three outstanding members of the squad deserve special mention for their unusual contribution to the season's success.

Captain McLaughlin not only holds the College discus record of Hampden-Sydney College, but also broke the North Carolina record in the meet with Wake Forest, throwing the platter 132 feet. His versatility is shown by the score of points he received in the five meets, a total of 104.

The other two men are Jones and Harris. Jones was a close runner up to Captain McLaughlin, scoring 98 points, while Harris ranks third with a score of 61.

The results of this year's track season should serve as an inspiration to any future "Tiger" team that laments its loss of participants in any particular sport. Their success is a memorial to hard training and sincere devotion to their task.

TENNIS SQUAD

Tennis, 1929

TO DATE the netmen have broken even in their encounters, having won three and lost three contests. As Coach Graham has also assumed the coaching duties of Freshman Baseball, he, consequently, hasn't had so much time to devote to Tennis. So the burden of coaching has fallen upon Captain Smith, who has so faithfully and ably wielded the racket for four years. Around him and the veteran "Tom" Pumphrey the squad has been built. Tennis is the only sport that permits Freshman participation. The squad has been materially strengthened by drawing two regulars from this class, namely, Milburn and Talbot, both of whom have played very creditably and give great promise for the coming years.

While the team cannot boast of a record such as some of our late teams, yet one glance at the schedule shows that the season has been a success. The squad has performed most creditably and has had the most loyal backing of the student body.

Slate Hill

By ASA D. WATKINS

WHEN the present student generation of Hampden-Sydney College goes swimming in Venable's Pond possibly its divers from the college side of the water may glimpse, between uplifted arms, some distance away on the bare, red hill opposite, an irregular assemblage of various house units, with chimneys high and low, contingent upon a few shade trees. The musty historian would actually like to stop the gleaming diver, as he arches midair for his plunge, to insist: "Sir, wait a minute before you go under! Your mind is as naked of historical interest as is your splendid body of trunks or apron; nevertheless, you should know that yon edifice of which you have, perhaps, subconscious vision, is in reality your grandmother—alma; the mother, I mean, of your alma mater; in that house Hampden-Sydney College was founded! Now, sir, continue your dive."

The haphazard collection of wooden house-boxes in question is in fact the growth by continual additions through many generations of an original story-and-a-half five-roomed home. This modest dwelling was built in 1756 (the year after his marriage) by a colonial settler in Southside Virginia, Nathaniel Venable. According to the habit of Virginia builders of that time, the smallness of the dwelling house was offset by the village of outhouses surrounding it. In this backyard village was an "office" of the gentleman owner. Into this office, on February 1, 1775, came five members of Hanover Presbytery to plan the establishment of an academy for the youth of the surrounding counties. Captain Nathaniel Venable, their host, was one of the several appointed to draw plans for the buildings. The probability is that Nathaniel Venable was trying to secure a prep school to enable his six sons to enter Princeton College, New Jersey, where four of them later were graduated. However that may be, these gentlemen in Venable's office founded a school and that school soon turned into Hampden-Sydney College.

The office in which the founding of Hampden-Sydney took place was later moved up to the dwelling and attached to it as a kitchen. It may be seen at the extreme left in the accompanying photogravure.

Into the new Slate Hill dwelling moved Nathaniel Venable and his wife, Elizabeth Woodson—two strong-minded, strong-bodied pioneers. There were born all of their fourteen children except the oldest; there generations of their descendants lived, and there, back of the house, lie buried Nathaniel Venable and his wife, seven of their children and others of their descendants. Slate Hill was a source of public influence. Venable himself was "a Justice of the County Court, a member of the Committee of Safety for Prince Edward, a member of the General Council of Virginia, a member of the House of Burgesses, a charter trustee of Hampden-Sydney, an officer of the Revolution." As a loyal Revolutionist he resigned as vestryman of St. Patrick's Parish and helped establish a Presbyterian church where he might worship God without praying for the king. Two of his sons, born at Slate Hill, became officers in the Revolution. Another son, born at

SLATE HILL, THE BIRTHPLACE OF HAMPDEN-SYDNEY COLLEGE

Slate Hill, became United States Senator. The mother of these sons showed that she was a strong woman in perilous times. It was probably because her husband and she were active in forwarding supplies to the Revolutionists that General Tarleton and his troops raided Slate Hill. Mr. Venable, whom they wished to take prisoner, had escaped them. Mrs. Venable had hidden the supplies in tobacco hogsheads in front of the barn. The supplies also escaped. The British threatened to shoot Mrs. Venable unless she told where her husband was in hiding. She replied, "Shoot ahead." She also escaped. General Tarleton was probably angry, for he is said to have ridden his horse through the front hall of the dwelling. It is said that his horse's hoof-prints were in the hall floor till the floor was renewed. Those who renewed the floor probably had less sentiment than thrift.

Slate Hill descended in time to William Henry Venable, son of Richard N., Jr., son of Richard N., Sr., son of Nathaniel. This Henry Venable sustained the tradition of his fathers. He and his sister-in-law's brother, Henry Edmunds, were behind an embankment firing at the Yankee "sharpshooters" during the Battle of Rich's Mountain in the Civil War. Henry Venable ~~raised~~ <sup>ran</sup> up to shoot and was instantly killed. Henry Edmunds raised his head next and had his ear shot off. John McCampbell Venable, brother of the slain Henry, inherited Henry's home, Slate Hill, and moved there with his wife, Betty Edmunds, in 1863. They were the last Venables to own the old place. They lived there until Mr. John Venable's death in 1899, and then as they had no children, Slate Hill was sold.

It was because they had no children of their own that Mr. and Mrs. John Venable made Slate Hill, during their long residence there, the home of many Hampden-Sydney College and Worsham Academy students. "Aunt Bet's boys" are a numerous and grateful progeny. They bear witness to the easy-going and constant good humor of "Uncle John" and the diligent and kindly care of "Aunt Bet." Both knew how to deal with boys. Some solicitous friends once sent Mrs. Venable word that if she took in a certain wild boy she herself would have to leave home. "As soon as I heard that," says Aunt Bet, "I decided to take him. And he turned out a good boy; he and I hadn't the least trouble." Now in her ninety-fifth year "Aunt Bet" lives at "The Maples" at Hampden-Sydney and reviews with pleasure her long list of foster sons who lived at Slate Hill while attending either the Worsham Academy (under Professor Thornton, Doctor Wharey or Professor Whiting, as headmasters) or Hampden-Sydney College (under Doctors Atkinson or McIlwaine, as presidents). There were in the 1870's: Robert Bouldin, from California; Frank Irving (Va.); "Garry" Marshall (Va.); Henry Hundley (Va.); Walter and Lee Barnett (Md.); Harry and Howard Miller and Henry Howland (all from Texas). There were in the '80's: William and Flood Morton (Va.); Joe Baird (N. C.). There were in the '90's: Asa Watkins (Va.); Harry Watkins (N. C.); William Edmunds, Warren White, George and Cabell Fitzgerald, Welford Loiraine, Eliot Jones, Michaux Raine, Hugh Brand, Tom Goode, Tom Gilliam (all of Virginia).

The home of "Uncle John" and "Aunt Bet" was a boy's paradise. The fellows staying there enjoyed room without restrictions, care without restraint, interest without encroachment, companionship without pretense, kindness without demands and food without limit. Fried chicken, old hams, pound cake and cookies, sweet-meats and cherry preserves flowed from some perennial spring. "Aunt Bet" darned socks and counted underwear, tied sore fingers and mopped sore throats, made pies and filled lunch baskets (Slate Hill was two miles from College). It was around her own big open fire in "the chamber" that we "got our lessons" at night and when we walked the two miles home from college after literary society or fraternity meetings, there were her keys left out for midnight raids on her pantry, and there was no reproof at breakfast next morning for the "rough-housing" at one a. m. up stairs. Incidentally, our board and room cost us ten dollars a month.

Slate Hill in those days had an atmosphere all its own. The two rows of great box bushes leading to the front door were fully twenty feet high and met over the brick walkway. Huge elms spread between the front porch and the garden gate. On the green grass under these elms often strutted peacocks—the proper flare of gorgeousness against stately boxwood. And the scent of boxwood filled the old garden, the loveliest spot at Slate Hill. "Aunt Bet" with her own hands had planted the wonderful box-maze there and her Malmaison roses bloomed across the box hedges. Behind the boxwood in that old garden the college boys used to tramp learning their declamations and orations, while the roses listened patiently though blushing. And, on the warm June nights, when we were busy over examinations, the mocking birds began to sing in the hedge promptly at midnight, while the odor of honeysuckle filled the yard. And it was by dawn in the dew-filled garden full of "Aunt Bet's" roses that Asa and Harry Watkins walked after the last night they spent at Slate Hill. They had come back to keep watch that night over the body of dear "Uncle John" as he slept his last sleep in the large chamber to the left of the hall.

The wealthy friend of Hampden-Sydney who will present to the College Slate Hill farm as the much needed dairy-farm and Slate Hill residence to be restored as a club and museum, will do an act wherein history and sentiment will kiss each other, while beauty and practicality will be united in bonds that many alumni are ready to call holy.

The Kaleidoscope — An Inspiration

By DANDRIDGE SPOTSWOOD, '93

AMERICAN college customs are decidedly original and interesting; but save for catalogues and degrees we have little in common with the collegiate customs of our cousins across the water. College publications were instituted in the following order: the catalogue, by the faculty; literary monthly, fostered by the literary societies which, it is distressing to relate, have waned; the annual, created through class and fraternity effort; the weekly, an exponent of the athletic association; lastly, the funny sheet, or comic quarterly, which at times finds a use chiefly iconoclastic in spirit.

When I attended Pantops Academy there were two college annuals in the library, the first edition of Corks and Curls, published in 1886 at the University of Virginia, and The Banner, of Yale, the senior of all annuals. For many years this publication consisted of but a few pages. It is interesting to note that the name Corks and Curls is distinctively original at Virginia. To cork means to fail and to curl to succeed in one's examinations.

One of the main attractions at Pantops was the proximity of Edge Hill, the former home of Thomas Mann Randolph, which had been converted into a select school for young ladies. This would suggest that there were students at Pantops with other thoughts than study. And I happened to be in this class. Of the total enrollment of fifty-five several were former students of the University, two were from Hampden-Sydney and Mercer University, respectively.

Colleges and universities of that day paid little attention to entrance examinations. One could remain indefinitely at Yale as easily as at Cumberland or Transylvania. It was the degree that counted. They were difficult to secure, particularly the long forgotten "Green Ticket" at the University. There were fewer qualifying for this "ticket" than now usually aspire for the American brand of Ph. D. at any institution.

My parents had destined me for that true field of Presbyterianism, Princeton. But "Johnny R.," the affectionate name with which we endowed Professor John R. Sampson, the principal of the Academy, was a product of Hampden-Sydney and invariably took the keenest interest in his Alma Mater. Through his guidance I was introduced to Prince Edward's historic educational seat.

My arrival was during a heavy rain. I was nearly torn to pieces by "Farmer John" Chumbley and "Shorty" Harper, both of '92, and of the rushing committee of Union Hall. But it took the persuasive powers of "Old Wat" Lacy, '92, Denny, '91, and Ned Campbell, '92, to persuade me that attaching to my person the blue and white ribbon of Union, with the inscription "Me socium summis ad jungere rebus," was the proper thing to do. Thus I made my entrance in college life. With a freshman, political ambitions mean a great deal. The hope of becoming a "Marshal of the Sophomores" at mid-winter festivities was as deeply felt as similiar feelings are indulged in at Yale for the post of a class deacon.

My room mate, "Baby" Budd, of '94, and myself had our furniture shipped by devoted parents from Petersburg. But when we landed in our beds for rest we unfortunately discovered that the slats had been removed and strings had been substituted. Hence we soon found ourselves on the floor.

A few days later, Higginbotham, '92, called to offer some friendly advice, notably concerning the difficulties in receiving a fraternity "bid." But I was not as "barbaric" as this junior imagined, having belonged to Mu Omicron at Pantops.

We were told that if we were not spiked by Saturday there was very little chance as all the fraternities had full memberships and that ten members was a conservative limit. But we were convinced that being a member of a Greek order, with chapters we could never see, was not a sine qua non for happiness as much as some of the silver-tongued conversationalists would endeavor to make the unsophisticated freshman believe.

The college belfry in those days could be easily considered as a strategic point to loiter about. It was certainly a safe place from the intrusion of water bags that, in mild weather, it was customary to toss from the upper floors of "Cushing" upon the unsuspecting innocent who came too close to the building.

After Higginbotham's warning I was in a receptive mood to be pledged by one of several Greek factions with whose members I felt friendly. The freshman seldom inquires, as he should, who the members of one's fraternity in his home town are. As Ned Campbell arrived before my friends in Phi Psi, the deed was quickly over and I assented without making any inquiries. I was now a step further in college life.

It was in the spring of 1891 that the thought of colors and a college annual first took seed with me. At this period the various bands of "Greeks" were anxious to garner as many "honors" as they could and editorships, managerships, etc., were beginning to be sought after.

I have often thought, in comparing notes with other college men, that the companionship of a fraternity group was largely like marriage—thoroughly speculative. Very fortunate indeed it was for me to find a suitable crowd, and doing this means joining a "good fraternity." The cementing of friendships is that which gives essence and tone to such organizations, otherwise they are merely clubs. For, as Montaigne says: "Friendship is the highest degree of perfection in society."

In consequence of happy fraternal relations I gained an inspiration that aided me in bringing my "order" two distinctively new honors, college colors and a college annual and later the cap and gown.

The Chi Phi's, who were fortunate in having a small chapter roll, received from nearly all chapters their annuals. They usually favored me with their perusal. The Liber Brunensis, of Brown, the Targum, of Rutgers (then about the size of Hampden-Sydney) and the year books of North Carolina and Georgia which had just been published were sent my fraternity through appreciative secretaries.

Phi Gamma Delta had inspired the dream. When I became a senior (special), Gardner Leonard, a Williams College boy, suggested that I have my class adopt the academic gown, then only in use at one place in the South, Sewanee. This I succeeded in doing.

As a senior I felt that I had accumulated sufficient prestige through an endowment of official positions, acts, etc., to go further and create the annual.

Words are a mystery and a marvel. And had I worked as hard in languages as I did in trying to arrive at a name for my publication I might have graduated during my three years stay. It was impossible to fashion anything out of the words comprising the college patronymic name. The name Pandora (Georgia) appealed to me very much. Conglomerata was the nearest approach to what I wanted. But it sounded harsh. No name could have been selected that met with as much approval as "Kaleidoscope." I never knew until years after that Middlebury, then smaller than our college, had chosen about the same time a similar name for their annual. I selected my staff and had them approved by their respective classes and fraternities. The staff would not work. They were obsessed with fear that failure would transpire. I forgot about failure and its possibilities. I contracted to pay for the entire project at a cost of approximately five hundred dollars and sold five hundred and thirty dollars worth of books and advertising.

Through the advice of the Meriden Gravure Company I secured finer photogravures than those which had appeared previously in any southern annual. Pictures were made of all the teams. And after the desertion of the staff I did the entire work myself as Editor-in-Chief, Business Manager and Art Editor. I dislike to mention art for the drawings were very crude compared to present day effort. But everything was prepared at Hampden-Sydney and not purchased elsewhere as many non-technical colleges now practice.

Hampden-Sydney has easily been among the first fifteen colleges in America to originate journalistic effort. Harvard and Yale both attempted literary monthlies around 1806. They did not last. Harvard's first catalogue appeared in 1830, just seven years after the catalogue of Hampden-Sydney in 1823. Incidentally, this was the period of time that the success of our college was something of a handicap to Mr. Jefferson in the fulfillment of his ideas respecting a central college, otherwise the University of Virginia.

The University of Virginia, in 1839, brought forth the first college literary magazine in the south, after The Collegian (Harvard 1830) and the Yale Literary (1837), and one of the first in the country that had any real tenure of life. The Hampden-Sydney and North Carolina Magazines appeared in 1850. Washington and Lee established The Southern Collegian in 1868, but there is a tradition in Lexington of the existence of a publication called The Owl around the early thirties. However, no one has ever seen a copy. The Phi Kappa Psi chapter of Hampden-Sydney published one of the first fraternity publications of any fraternity. Its date has been mentioned as 1857. This chapter, as well as its great rival, the Betas, were among the most aggressive at this period in the South. They did great honor to their respective orders. I am sorry to say during the unfortunate transition stage from a real fraternity to the larger group, or club idea, the work of these chapters has never been fully appreciated by their respective organizations. It was really national in scope. The Philanthropic Society (a literary fraternity) in 1850 printed a catalogue of all members and alumni. It was one of the very first college society catalogues in the country.

Athletic rivalry gave incentive to the use of colors in distinguishing teams. The first instance being at Harvard where the famous crimson originated from the plebeian "bandanna handkerchiefs" worn at a regatta to distinguish Harvard's oarsmen from those of Yale. Yale blue was adopted from Cambridge University. Princeton's colors are suggestive of the House of Orange—Nassau—more than those of William and Mary, both of whom could very appropriately adopt the liveries of this royal house. Incidentally, William and Mary is one of the few colleges in the world possessing a grant of a coat of arms from the college of Heralds. The colors displayed are green, silver and gold.

Garnet and gray, used on the covers of our annual, were first used at the University of Virginia. At the instance of Allen Potts they were changed to orange and blue. The latter for a long time have been the colors of the University of Michigan. Tradition says that this university secured the idea from the colors of the Chi Psi fraternity which founded a chapter there in 1850 when there were slightly more than fifty students and no president.

Intercollegiate athletic relations in Virginia first began in 1872 with a baseball game between Washington and Lee and the University of Virginia, though they were not renewed for many years thereafter. At the same time the good ladies of Lexington were in the habit of giving receptions where refreshments were sold. Promenading, so the advertisements state, was to be allowed. Incidentally, may I call your attention to the disappearance of the "Promenade" out of American college life.

To Hampden-Sydney belongs the honor, among American colleges, of first using a distinctive color, royal purple. Virginia college authorities are somewhat like their English or Canadian cousins, they pay little attention to college life and have never been able to conceive of its great merit as an asset in the government of the institution through its organizations; or the charm it has for the old time alumnus in holding his allegiance. Not until recently did many of us learn that in 1777, when Governor Patrick Henry called out the Hampden-Sydney boys to defend the capital against the British, that they wore purple hunting shirts as a distinguishing feature. Had dear old Henneman known this the purple tiger of Sewanee's mountains would have probably dwelt amidst Prince Edward's hills instead of his present lair.

Hampden-Sydney College

This institution opened its doors on January 1, 1776, and is the only college in America from which the students entered the Revolutionary War in a body.

Among its charter trustees were James Madison, afterward President of the United States, and Patrick Henry.

It stands high among the list of "small colleges" which have sent from their halls a remarkable number of leaders and successful men in every profession, in every walk of life.

It has always adhered to the standards of high scholarship and gentlemanly conduct. It is definitely Christian in its beliefs and outlook. In its physical equipment and in its courses of study it meets the most rigid modern requirements.

The degrees of Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Science are given.
